WOMEN HERE TAKE BIG MANGANESE LITTLE INTEREST DEPOSIT NEARBY

In Movement to Organize for Preparedness. Effort to Stimulate Enthusiasm Does not Meet with Ready Response.

Gettysburg women generally, and many of those in the county, do not take enthusiastically to the idea of preparedness as it is being advanced by some of the most prominent women in the state. Several weeks ago Mrs. Walter H. O'Neal was named as the local representative of the Pennsylvania Women's Division for National Preparedness, to find out the exact sentiment here. On April 11th Mrs. O'Neal will go to Philadelphia to be present at a conference of organizers, when she will acquaint all concerned with the feeling here. The conference will be held at the home of Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel.

Attending the session, which has been called to enable the organizers to make their reports relative to the formation of chapters throughout the state, will be a number of the most widely known club women and society women in the state.

It is expected that there will be a lengthy discussion regarding the Mexican situation. Mrs. Drexel will ascertain from the organizers how quickly their respective chapters could rush supplies to the state headquarters in the event of war or calamity. Recently several of the officers of the Division announced that the Women's Preparedness Organization would have between $75,000 and $100,000 at its command within twenty-four hours in the event of the United States becoming engaged in a war with Mexico or any other country.

E. T. Stotesbury and George W. Childs Drexel have each pledged $10,000 to the Division in the event of war, while Livingston Biddle has agreed to contribute $50,000. Numerous other pledges, ranging from $1.00 to $500, also have been received.

During the meeting announcements will be made regarding the future plans of the Women's Preparedness Movement. Arrangement will be made for a large number of Preparedness meetings to be held in many parts of the State. The conference will be preceded by a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Drexel.

In Vicinity of Pine Grove Lies Ore that is in Great Demand by Steel Manufacturing Concerns.

Extensive deposits of manganese ore in the Blue Ridge Mountains, the value of which substance has increased enormously since the European war began, probably will be made available to steel manufacturers in a short time.

The 450 acres contain veins 50 feet thick of ore that assays 40 to 45 per cent pure ferro-manganese, and Charles Wharton, Jr., owner, stated that he had recently received many inquiries from steel manufacturers. Whether he will work the mines himself or sell the property has not been divulged.

Mr. Wharton, who is now in Pittsburgh, said the deposit was probably one of the most extensive and valuable in the world, and adjoining it are valuable veins of high-grade ore. He believes Pennsylvania will again become the chief iron-producing State of the Union.

The lands in question are located along the Pine Grove branch of the Reading Railway. On the property are several old mines, operated in the '40's and '50's by the father of the present owner, the late Charles Wharton. In the late '90's some ore was mined and shipped to the Troy Steel Company, of Troy, N. Y.

Mr. Wharton predicts a price of $200 per ton for the ore, and says that 20,000 acres of the iron lands lie in the Blue Ridge Mountains in Cumberland, Franklin, York, and Berks counties. The veins are much broken and hard to locate, he says.

"My father had great faith in the mining future of the Blue Ridge," Mr. Wharton said, "especially in the section where this property is located. He said to me 40 years ago that some day the deposits of manganese and other minerals would be in great demand and produce vast wealth. He advised me not to let the property go out of my hands until the day should arrive when its true value would be recognized, and I have obeyed his wish."

DELTA DRY AT LAST

Prohibition Advocates Win Fight Lasting Long Time.

After a fight waged by the temperance forces of lower York county for a period of five years, Delta has gone "dry." In a decision handed down Monday by Judges Wanner and Ross the renewal of Daniel W. McLaughlin's application for a liquor license for the Hotel Auditorium, of Delta, was refused.

No reasons were assigned by the court for its ruling, but the remonstrances against the license, which were heard February 1, included allegations of violation of the liquor laws, and that a liquor license was not necessary for the accommodation of the public. The liquor license at the other hotel in the borough was knocked out a year ago. A temperance hotel was erected in the borough several years ago.

RELEASE FIVE DEER IN FOREST

Fine New England Animals Given Freedom on Caledonia Reserve, and Five More will be Placed Near Mont Alto.

Five of the ten New England deer apportioned to this section by the state game commission, to be released on state ground, have been conveyed to Dark Hollow, near the Adams-Cumberland line on the Caledonia reserve. The deer were crated and were sent by the state game authorities of New Hampshire. Five more are soon to arrive for distribution in the northern part of the Mont Alto section.

The total weight of the deer when crated was 120 pounds and it was estimated that the animals, free, would average about 100 pounds. The largest stag is aged about four years while the others are younger and smaller. The species is the same as our red or Virginia deer.

When liberated the animals first went to a nearby stream and then, started on the mountain slopes bounding as if glad to be freed. Each animal has a slit or marker on its ear by which it may be distinguished from our native deer.

Ten days previous to the liberation of the deer under the direction of the state game commission five wild turkeys were turned free in the Caledonia section of the South Mountain.

GETTIER-NICHOLS

Former Biglerville Man Marries an Iowa School Teacher.

Miss Anna Nichols, of Sibley, Iowa, and Harry Gettier, also of that place, a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Gettier, of Biglerville, were married in St. Andrew's Church, Sibley, on March 2. Of the bride an Iowa paper has the following to say: "She is a young lady of charming qualities and admirably suited to preside over her new duties. She is a graduate of St. Mary's Academy of Oneil, Nebraska, as well as St. Clare's in Clinton, Iowa, and has been teaching school very successfully near Sibley since her graduation five years ago." Of the bridegroom the same paper says, "He is a young man of integrity and worth, and very well and favorably known in this community."

The honeymoon was spent in Iowa and Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Gettier will reside on a farm near Lincoln, Nebraska, where the former has several uncles who have large land interests.

FELL DOWN STAIRWAY

Ortanna Woman Goes to Hospital for X-Ray Test.

Falling headlong down a flight of stairs at her home in Ortanna, on Sunday, Mrs. Samuel Baumgardner escaped with a dislocated shoulder and severe shock. She was taken to the York hospital on Monday to have an x-ray examination made to determine whether or not any bones were broken, but no fractures were discovered. She returned home Monday evening. Mrs. Baumgardner sustained a broken ankle several years ago and her fall on Sunday was caused by the ankle turning.

BASE BALL MEETING

Kurtz Playground Plan Does not Meet with Favor.

The use of Nixon Field, if permission can be secured, and the incorporation of the association to manage the Gettysburg base ball team this summer were the principal things determined upon at Monday evening's meeting of fans in the office of S. S. Neely Esq., president of last year's club.

It is proposed to sell fifty shares at $20 each, and of this number fifteen were subscribed Monday night. Each stockholder will receive fifty tickets which will be transferable. The incorporation of the club will limit the personal responsibility of its finances. The following committee will canvass the town for the purpose of selling stock, J. A. Holtzworth, H. E. Bumbaugh, C. J. Kimple, H. B. Sefton, and J. W. Brehm.

C. W. Myers, Ira Plank, and R. P. Funkhouser were appointed to confer with the college authorities relative to the use of Nixon Field. A well developed opposition among fans to the use of the Kurtz Playground made that project seem unwise, unless another place can be secured.

BRITISH BLOW UP TEUTON TRENCHES

Berlin Tells of Destruction of 100 Yards of Position.

FRENCH AWAIT ONSLAUGHT

Violent Bombardment North of Verdun Indicates New Attacks May be Expected.

London, March 28.—More than 100 yards of German trenches near St. Etloi have been blown up by the British, German army headquarters at Berlin announced in its statement. The text of the statement reads: "By an extensive mine explosion the British damaged our position near St. Etloi, south of Ypres."

"More than 100 yards of trenches were blown up. Casualties were caused among the company occupying the positions."

"In the district northeast and east of Vermeille we were successful in mine fighting and took some prisoners."

"Further south near La Boisselle, northeast of Albert, some weak English detachments attempted to advance against our positions. They were prevented by our fire."

"During the last few days the British again shelled the town of Lens. In the Argonne and in the region of the Meuse artillery and other firing diminished only temporarily."

"Continuation of a violent bombardment east of the Meuse river, north of Verdun, indicates the probability that no attacks by the Germans may be expected in that direction. The front between Douaumont and Vaux is bearing the brunt of the attack. The infantry has not been employed in this region nor elsewhere along the Franco-Belgian front, so far as the official reports show."

The text of the French war office statement follows:

"In the Argonne district there has been fighting with mines which resulted to our advantage at La Fille Mortie. There has also been some engagements with bombs in the sector of Courtes Cheuses."

"West of the river Meuse the night was relatively calm. East of the river there has been uninterrupted artillery firing along the Douaumont-Vaux front."

"In the Woëvre district there has been a fairly spirited bombardment, particularly in the region of Moulinville and Chatillon, but no infantry actions. On the remainder of the front the night was quiet."

DEADLOCK IN COAL DISPUTE

Operators Have Refused Fifteen of Miners' Eighteen Demands.

Philadelphia, March 28.—Beginning the second week of their conference, the bituminous coal operators and miners of the central Pennsylvania district were deadlocked on the demand of the miners for abolition of the permanent board of arbitration to settle disputes arising from the wage scale agreement.

The operators have refused fifteen of the eighteen demands, and it is predicted that they will veto the request for elimination of arbitration boards. The two remaining demands have not been discussed, but they will be taken up quickly.

The operators, according to the miners, will veto all of the demands. Such action will be followed by the appointment of an arbitration committee, with the operators and miners represented by small delegations, who will attempt to reach an agreement.

The conference is for the purpose of adopting a new wage schedule and agreement, to supersede the one ratified in 1912, which expires automatically next Saturday.

No suspension of work at the mines is threatened by the miners, who declare they will not take any steps to cripple the operators until they are convinced their demand for a five percent wage increase will be turned down absolutely.

Gives Life for Friend.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 28.—Edward Davis, a workman at the plant of the Aetna Chemical company, saw his friend, James Dougherty, another workman, overcome by gas as he entered an empty tank. Davis ran to his assistance and just had carried him to safety, when he fell down the tank himself. Dougherty, physicians said, will recover.

Stowaway in Car Starved to Death.

Cortland, N. Y., March 28.—When a carload of steel shipped from Youngstown, O., to a carriage goods concern here was opened, the body of Frank Carroll, of Syracuse, was found in the car. The man had died of starvation. The body was frozen. The car left Youngstown March 6, and came through with seals unbroken.

Sugar Duty Until 1920.

Washington, March 28.—Extension of the existing duty of one cent a pound on sugar until 1920, as a substitute for the house free sugar repeal bill, which would extend it indefinitely, was recommended to the Democrats of the senate in caucus by Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee. No action was taken.

MEXICAN TROUBLE MEANS BIG ARMY

Fight There to Result In Increase of Military Strength.

HASTENS VOTE ON MEASURE

Uncle Joe Cannon Gives Long List of Good Reasons Why the United States Should Have a Larger Army—Officers See Little Glory in Campaign Now Going on in Mexico.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, March 28.—[Special.]—Many army officers deplored the necessity of going into Mexico, or at least they spoke in that vein. They did not believe that a campaign in the mountains and chaparral while hunting elusive bandits would mean much glory for any one and that many a good man would be perished and put away without having had much chance for a stand-up fight with the enemy.

At the same time this affair in Mexico has made possible army legislation. Without it there would have been a long contest, and the bill as finally passed would have been far short of what it will be when enacted into law. The brush in Mexico gave an impetus to the army increase.

"Our Great Burdens."

Former Speaker Cannon, supporting the army increase, said he favored it from every standpoint. First of all, on account of "the great burdens that this country has to bear," which he enumerated:

"The Monroe doctrine, taking possession of Santo Domingo, Haiti, Nicaragua; then there are the Sandwich Islands, the Panama canal and the Philippines. Oh, the Philippines!" cried Uncle Joe. "We have them. By the treaty made by President McKinley and ratified by the senate, with the help of William Jennings Bryan, we have the Philippines and will have the Philippines longer than any of us live. Having put our hands to the plow, we will not turn back."

His remarks were greeted with loud applause on the Republican side and silence among the Democrats.

But Was He Right?

There is still a question whether Cannon was right in regard to the retention of the Philippines. It has not been tested in the house, but it may be that enough Democrats have been found to oppose the Clarke amendment to prevent its enactment. At all events, there has been no great rush to bring the Philippine bill with its independence provisions before the house. The delay does not look favorable to its passage.

Incidentally it may be stated that most of the reasons enumerated by Cannon for the army increase came to us as a result of the Spanish war. Had it not been for that conflict we would not have had so many "burdens."

Why Not a Pleasant Dream?

Talking on the armor plate bill, Senator Pittman naturally spoke of the army, which he said he hoped would be able to match any in the world, protecting a great commerce on the high seas and our shores against invasion.

"Well, that may be so," remarked the practical Gallinger of New Hampshire, "but it is a dream."

"It may be a dream," replied Pittman, "but I do not see why we cannot have a pleasant dream."

Condoles With Shafroth.

Senator Thomas of Colorado frequently goes around to the seat of his colleague, John Shafroth, and condoles with him. "John," he says, "I see that your speech is still hung up in the air. Here we are almost breathlessly waiting for you to finish your speech on the water power bill and are each day disappointed."

The water power bill seems destined to have a long wait. Shafroth had just begun a speech and was only partially started when the bill was crowded out by more important measures.

Called It a Peace Bill.

Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts was criticizing the Hay army bill, saying that it was like the mountain which produced a mouse. He was interrupted by James of Michigan, who asked:

"Is not this bill in its present form a joke and such that 'peace at any price' advocates as William Jennings Bryan, Henry Ford and Jane Addams could all vote for it?"

"I will say to my fellow member and Spanish war veteran that he is right," responded Gardner.

Not a Good School.

Congressman Hull of Iowa seems to have found congress lacking in scholastic qualities. "Since I came to congress," he told the house one day, "I have been asking questions, and I confess that the more I ask the less I learn."

Trained to Be a Soldier.

Minority Leader Mann told the house that during his university term he had three years of military training, that he was captain of two different companies for a year each. Then he went a little further and said that at the time of the Spanish war he offered to enlist as a private in an Illinois regiment.

But everybody is glad that Mann did not become a soldier and instead remained in congress, where he has been so useful.

Uncle Eben.

"Some men is sech gamblers," said Uncle Eben, "dat dey say things dey's likely to be sorry fur, jes' foh de sake of takin' a chance."

MR. AND MRS. JOHN PECK

DR. WAITE CONFESSES?

Alleged Poisoner Made Statement to His Brother.

New York, March 28.—District Attorney Warren was informed that Dr. Arthur Warren Waite has made a new confession of his complicity in the death of his father-in-law, John E. Peck.

Judge Swann was at his country place and had not been able to communicate with Frank A. Waite, a brother of the accused dentist, to whom the new statement was made in Bellevue hospital prison ward.

Frank A. Waite left the hospital after urging the dentist to tell the truth.

"I'll tell you something," Frank Waite said to the reporters. "My brother has made a new statement."

"Did he make a confession?"

"He amplified and corrected the story he had already told to me. I am not at liberty to say what that was. My brother's physical condition is good, but mentally I fear there is something wrong, although I am not an alienist."

CZAR AT THE FRONT

FOR GREAT DRIVES

Russians Plunging at German Line, Says Berlin.

London, March 28.—The second week of the great Russian offensive opened with the czar's troops hammering away at the Germans at three points.

Czar Nicholas is at the front, and his presence there has inspired the Russian officers and their men to unusual feats of valor. The czar has congratulated his commanding generals at the northern end of the front upon the steady advances made.

The three chief zones of fighting lie around Jakobstadt in front of Dvinsk and northwest of Wisley. At other points on the front artillery duels are on.

The Russian have amassed enormous quantities of artillery and ammunition, together with big forces of reserve troops, and are pressing the Germans hard at every point of contact, according to Petrograd dispatches.

Violent attacks have been resumed by the Russians against the northern end of the eastern front, Berlin declaring that they advanced in "unprecedented" numbers northwest of Jakobstadt, on the Dvina line. They were totally unsuccessful, however, the German war office declares, and suffered enormous losses.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg's forces south of Dvinsk have also been subjected to heavy attacks, but these were repulsed and in counter-attacks west Prussian regiments recaptured artillery observation positions south of Lake Narocz, lost a week ago, taking besides nearly 2200 prisoners and several machine guns, according to Berlin.

Boiler Explosion Kills Five.

Lexington, Ky., March 28.—Five men were killed and twelve others injured, some seriously, when a boiler exploded at the Manual Riddle Grist Mill, on Peter Creek, near Pikeville, Ky., according to word received here. No details of the explosion or the names of the men killed or injured were given.

VILLA NEARING HIDING PLACE

Reported to Have Reached San Geronimo Canyon.

DYING HORSES MARK TRAIL

Pershing's Cavalry Guard Passed Leading Into Fastnesses—250 Miles Inside Mexico and Still Going.

El Paso, Tex., March 28.—Francisco Villa, with American soldiers on his heels, is making his way southwestward into the Sierra Tarahumare from Nandiquipa.

Official reports from Brigadier General John J. Pershing, commander of the United States expeditionary force say the American advanced base is now 250 miles south of the border.

Flying columns of the American cavalry are said to be sealing up all the trails and passes they can reach in the mountainous district. With the outlets barred, squadrons of cavalry and detachments of infantry, operating from the base near Casas Grandes will comb the country to drive the bandit into the open.

An unofficial report in Juarez says Villa has reached San Geronimo canyon, south of Guerrero, where for months at a time the troops of Porfirio Diaz, San Geronimo canyon 150 miles long, with almost perpendicular walls rising to heavily wooded heights above. It affords every means for evasion of a pursuing force or for a stand by a small band against superior odds.

Another report says both the Carranza and the American forces are constantly harassing Villa, who is at El Oso.

General Gaviro said General Bertran reported he was working in perfect accord with General Pershing. This statement was taken to mean that American troops must be using the Mexico Northwestern railroad to Madera, as persons who know the country well say there is no possible means other than the railway by which cavalry could reach Madera from Casas Grandes.

General Pershing expects it will take months to capture Villa. Returning American refugees and cattlemen who know the country doubt that he ever will be taken. The nature of the country and the fact that he is among people who idolize him, make his capture unlikely, they say.

A rather alarming note is contained in the statement that half the Constitutional garrison at Nandiquipa has disappeared, and that some of them at least are believed to have joined Villa.

Utmost haste is being made by Villa in his flight, neither men nor horses being spared. It is known he is virtually without supplies and ammunition, and it is reported he is trying to reach the neighborhood where he has ammunition cached in three places.

Ponies in the district through which he has passed recently say his men are ravenously hungry and almost in a state of starvation. Dead and dying horses discarded in the flight are found almost daily by American troops, eight being discovered Saturday.

General Pershing has returned to Casas Grandes, after several days south of that place perfecting the lines of communication between the Casas Grandes base and the advance columns.

In a wireless despatch to Columbus, N. M., he announces the establishment of a new base, near where the bandit is reported in retreat. This is understood to be at El Valle, seventy miles south of Casas Grandes. The cavalry men most closely pressing Villa are in three columns, commanded by Colonel George A. Dodd.

The one hope held of a speedy termination of the chase is that the flight of the bandits will be checked by starvation and the exhaustion of their ponies. Once safely in the midst of the Sierra Tarahumare, the task of running the bandit to his lair will be one of tremendous difficulty.

Many scouts and secret service men are being employed by General Funston. They will be paid out of a fund of $20,000 appropriated by the war department.

General Funston has received no word of sniping by Mexicans as reported from El Paso. He says General Pershing would report to him if it were true. Long messages have been received from General Pershing, but little is made public, except the fact that Villa has escaped and that three American columns are seeking to locate him.

ARMY LOSES SIX AEROPLANES

Two Machines Destroyed and Four Disabled in Mexico.

Washington, March 28.—General Funston reported to the war department that two of the eight aeroplanes which accompanied the Pershing expedition into Mexico have been destroyed and four of them disabled, leaving only two for active service.

It was assumed the machines were destroyed in accidents, and not in an engagement, but General Funston did not explain this point.

The war department took steps to replace the machines destroyed.

FOUR BEATEN IN NEW RIOT OUTBREAK

Two Trolley Cars Are Battered to Pieces.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 28.—Rioting again prevailed in Wilkes-Barre. Two trolley cars were battered into pieces and the four motormen and conductors severely beaten, one of them sustaining two broken ribs, he slides cuts and bruises.

Sheriff George E. Buss announced in a proclamation that he stands ready to interfere at any time. He declared he will preserve peace and order at all cost. He is prepared to swear in any number of deputies at the next outbreak. The sheriff states that conditions are intolerable and that lawlessness has reigned for three days past.

The disturbances came unexpectedly. The first cars sent over the Grove and Brown divisions were met with a fusillade of sticks, stones and bricks. The two cars were wrecked and the crews battered before the police arrived. No arrests were made.

Because of the prevalent mob spirit the Wilkes-Barre Railway company discontinued service on several lines. With inadequate police protection the company refused to jeopardize further the lives of its trainmen and passengers.

Municipal authorities say the disorders are a direct answer to the challenge of the Law and Order league recently formed. Strike sympathizers were stirred by this action, they say.

TROOPS IN MEXICO FACE HARDSHIPS; CLIMATE AND DUST CAUSE SUFFERING

Dispatch Bearer, Ill. Tells First Story of March of Pershing's Men Through the Deserts.

Found All the Towns Deserted With Exception of One or Two Decrepit Old Men.

WITH reinforcements being rushed to the support of the United States troops now in Mexico and on the border, and with the possibility that the entire national guard may be ordered to the frontier, the interests of the country are centered there today.

General Pershing, with his force, the first to enter Mexico, faced the kind of warfare that had been predicted. He scoured the mountains for traces of the outlaw band which attacked Columbus, N. M.

There are several varieties of hell on earth, and among them must be included an infantry hike along the dusty roads of northern Mexico, says one correspondent.

It is bad enough on the cavalry; it is tough on the horse artillery, and it is down the long line of march into Chihuahua.

Prowling in his bed at the isolation hospital at Fort Bliss, suffering from dysentery and at times barely able to speak from an affection of his vocal cords caused by the alkali dust, the sergeant said:

"When we went in the sun was burning hot, there was not a breath of air stirring, and the dust soon hung over the road like a curtain. It got into our eyes and mouths, and we could hardly breathe. It bothered the horses too. Many of the boys put wet handkerchiefs into their hats to keep the sun from boring into their skulls and rode along with closed eyes to keep out the dust and glare. Goggles didn't seem to help.

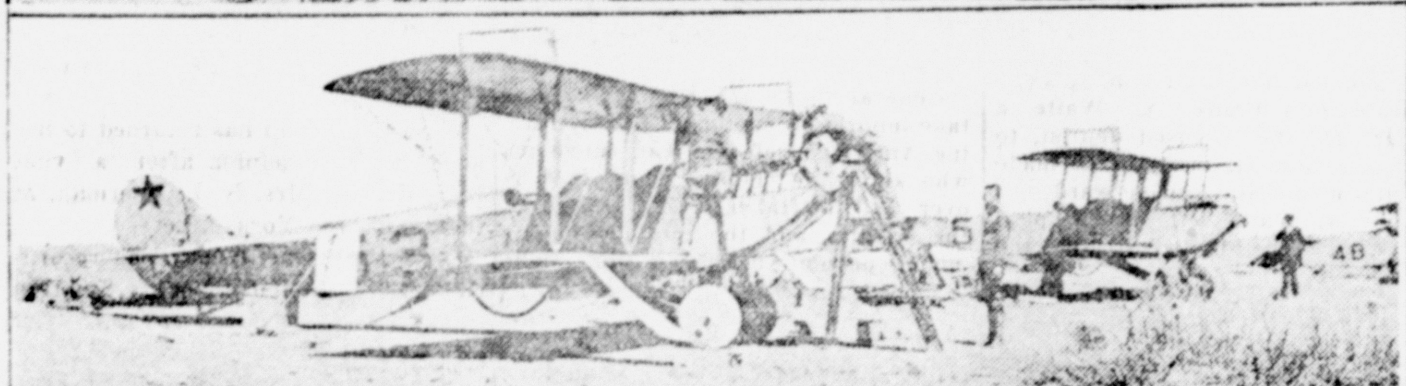

Men Half Blinded by Dust.

"Many of the men were half blinded in a couple of hours. The infantrymen would stumble along with their eyes shut as much as possible. Soon my eyes began to itch around the edges, then they felt as big as camp kettles, and finally everything got dark. I had inhaled a lot of the alkali dust and my throat began to get sore.

"After two hours' travel the faces of the boys looked like painted Indians. Everybody was perspiring freely. The dust would settle on their faces and then the sweat would run down, leaving a little furrow.

"As far back as you could see there was nothing but a line of dust. Men could not be distinguished.

"When we reached Las Palomas we hard on the men of the wagon trains and the motor trucks and even the little cars, that go buzzing by in white clouds.

But way, way back in the ruck, back in the track of all the hoofs and wheels that move General Pershing's flying columns steadily across the state of Chihuahua, tramps the infantry, taking the dust of the whole long drive after Francisco Villa.

The first couple of days these "dough boys" could be found scattered along the roads in squads nursing their sore and blistered feet while waiting for the ambulances to get up. Now they come swinging down the Mexican highway into camp with scarcely a man missing from the ranks.

They were "soft" in the beginning. Their feet were tender. The sixty-five pound pack on their backs turned at their hearts after the first few miles of the morning. Now they are gradually growing hardened and hured to the work.

Horses and mules died during the first couple of days and were left to the coyotes and the buzzards that trail every column. Cavalrymen ride in saddle sores, but the men piled up at night, limping a little, but still about.

Their very souls are steamed in dust during these marches. It is hot overhead. It is powdery soft under foot. The grind of the wagon wheels and the churn of the horses' hoofs have cut the dry roads to chaff.

A marching man inhales that dust with every breath. It settles in his clothing; it settles in his eyes, in his throat and in his ears.

By night a child comes on from the mountains surrounding the valley through which the troops are marching. This child got down to under packs belonging to their men who were unable to keep up under the load. Every officer shared his canteen of water with the privates.

Lieutenant Henry Meyers, riding at the head of M troop of the black Tenth cavalry, stopped his command beside a footweary band of infantrymen and made the troopers give their water over to the "dough boys."

All things considered, the horses and mules with the expedition have stood the journey well, the losses being comparatively insignificant, but the infantry has been wonderful.

Mexicans Amazed by Expedition.

The few Mexicans encountered stand at the roadside and view the long procession of Americans, that must seem to them interminable, in dumb amazement. They offer no comment, however, but rush around hunting up eggs and other articles to sell to the soldiers.

The squadron of seven aeroplanes which passed over the line of march from Columbus, headed south and moving so high that they looked like a flock of buzzards, reduced the Mexicans to silent wonder.

The equipment of the army division that is swinging over their heads was another source of astonishment to the inhabitants.

They are accustomed to armies, but not to an army which moves like this one.

Marching has been about the extent of the activities of the punitive expedition to date. No hostility has been encountered from the natives.

A vivid story of the drive into Mexico in search of Villa was told by Sergeant W. H. Harrison, Troop M, Tenth cavalry. He was a dispatch rider for Colonel Galbraith, chief of staff, and traveled several times to and

FOR NEW LICENSE

But Children under a Certain Age will not have to Pay.

An active movement in behalf of the proposed law for a fishermen's license along the lines of the hunters' license, is to be undertaken immediately by the State's fisheries authorities. The bill is being drawn and will be offered for discussion. In a statement issued in regard to the proposed Act, Commissioner of Fisheries N. R. Buller says:—

"This question is one that should be looked upon by all in a broad-minded way. There are three classes of fishermen in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania: the fishermen who fish in our great lake and our tidal waters for commercial purposes, the sportsman who fishes for the sport and recreation which he receives and which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, the class who fish for the purpose of securing a string of fish for food.

"The fishermen's license bill is being drawn up so that it will not become a hardship upon any particular person. The boy and girl under a certain age will be free to fish without a license.

"The fishermen may as well understand that in order to meet the many questions confronting the Department of Fisheries in the proper manner more funds must be available for the use of the department. The money derived from the fishermen's license will be used by the Department of Fisheries for the extensive propagation of fish for planting in the streams of the Commonwealth for the benefit of all the people, and it is useless to plant in our inland waters small fish, as the department cannot longer depend upon the natural production in the various streams, but must plant fish of almost catchable size. This means that the fish must be held at the hatcheries until they reach a length of from four to six inches."

SALE REPORTS

Prices Continue Satisfactory at the Late Spring Sales.

J. H. Reaver's sale in Cumberland township on Saturday amounted to $1,300. The best horse brought $180, the best cow $100, chickens 17 cents a pound.

The sale of E. Simpson Shriver, Mt. Joy township, on Monday amounted to about $2,550. The best horse brought $146, a pair of mules $208, the best cow $73.50, shoats averaged about $11 each.

The sale of Martin Stonestreet in Straban township on Monday amounted to $388.50. A colt brought $55, but the greater part of the sale consisted of household articles.

Helpful Chase Rabbits.

Good in Industry.

Thank God every morning that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and to do your best will breed you a hundred virtues which the idle will never know. —Charles Kingsley.

Pretty Compliment.

The father and mother were speaking before little John of the great beauty of a woman in the neighborhood. After his father had left the room John said seriously: "Mother, I don't think she is so very beautiful; she does not look a bit like you."

Old Superstitions.

In certain parts of the Slav countries a bride bows to the fire on the hearth when she first enters her new home. In parts of Bohemia families will not permit a brand to be taken from the hearth by an outsider or for the use of another family. In Albania, nothing unclean is thrown into the fire. Also after the birth of a child, forty days must elapse before a brand may be taken from the fire for the use of another household.

Talking and Listening.

Probably it would be better for every one of us if we listened more and talked less. Some need the advice more than others, but there are few that could not profit by it. With most people, listening is a good deal a matter of bargain. We let others tell us their troubles and interests and experiences so that we may have a decent excuse for telling them ours.—Youth's Companion.

CHAPTER II.

Beginning at the beginning and learning from the ground up was a long course for Bibbs at the sanitarium, with milk and "zwieback" as the basis of instruction; and the months were many and tiresome before he was considered near enough graduation to go for a walk leaning on a nurse and a cane. These and subsequent months saw the planning, the building and the completion of the new house, and it was to that abode of Bibbs that Bibbs was brought when the cane, without the nurse, was found sufficient to his support.

Edith met him at the station. "Well, well, Bibbs!" she said, as he came slowly through the gates, the last of all the travelers from that train. "Do you think they ought to let you come? You certainly don't look well!"

"But I certainly don't look better," he returned, in a voice that showed his salt; a drawl that was a necessity, for when Bibbs tried to speak quickly he stammered. "Up to about a month ago I took two people to see me. They had to get me in a line between 'em'."

Edith did not turn her eyes directly toward him again, after her first quick glance; and her expression, in spite of her, showed a faint, troubled distaste. She was nineteen, fair and slim, with small, unequal features, but a prettiness of color and a brilliancy of eyes that created a total impression close upon beauty. There was something about her, as kind old ladies say, that was very sweet; and there was something that was hurried and breathless. Bibbs bent upon her a steady, whimsical scrutiny as they stood at the curb, waiting for an automobile to cross the street to disengage itself from the traffic.

"Thank the new car," she said. "Everything's new. We've got four now, besides Jim's. Roscoe's got two."

"Edith, you look—" he began, and paused.

"Oh, we're all well," she said briskly; and then, as if something in his tone had caught her as significant, "Well, how do I look, Bibbs?"

"You look—" He paused again, taking in the full length of her—trim, brown shoes, scant, rough skirt, coat of brown and green, and a little rough hat in the mad mode—all suited to the October day.

"How do I look?" she insisted.

"You look," he answered, as his examination ended upon an incriminated watch of platinum and enamel at her wrist, "you look—expensive!"

"I expect I am!" she laughed. "Do you want Claus to help you in?"

"Oh, no," said Bibbs. "I'm alive." And after a fit of panting subsequent to his climbing into the car unaided, he added, "Of course, I have to tell people!"

"We only got your telegram this morning," she said, as they began to move rapidly through the "wholesale district" neighboring the station. "Mother said she'd hardly expected you this month."

"They seemed to be through with me up there in the country," he explained, gently. "At least they said they were, and they wouldn't keep me any longer, because so many really sick people wanted to get in. They told me to go home—and I didn't have any place else to go. It'll be all right, Edith; I'll sit in the woodshed until dark every day."

"Tshaw!" she laughed nervously. "Of course we're all of us glad to have you back."

"Yes?" he said. "Father?"

"Of course! Didn't he write and tell you to come home?" She did not turn to him with the question. All the while she rode with her face directly forward.

"No," he said; "father hasn't written."

"It seems," said Bibbs, in laconic protest, "that she married him."

The sister emitted a shrill cry, to be interpreted as contemptuous laughter, and, in her emotion, spoke too impulsively: "Why, she'd have married you!"

"No, no," he said; "she couldn't be that bad!"

"I didn't mean—" she began, distressed. "I only meant—I didn't mean—"

"Never mind, Edith," he consoled her. "You see, she couldn't have married me, because I didn't know her; and besides, if she's as mercenary as all that, she'd have been too clever. The head doctor even had to lend me the money for my ticket home."

"I didn't mean anything unpleasant about you," Edith babbled. "I only meant I thought she was the kind of a girl who was so simply crazy to marry somebody she'd have married anybody that asked her."

"Yes, yes," said Bibbs. "It's all straight." And, perceiving that his sister's expression was that of a person whose adroitness has set matters perfectly to rights, he chuckled silently.

"Roscoe's perfectly lovely to her," she continued, a moment later. "Too lovely! If he'd wake up a little and lay down the law, some day, like a man, I guess she'd respect him more and learn to behave herself!"

"Behave?"

"I didn't have any place else to go."

She flushed a little. "I expect I ought to've written something, or one of the boys—"

"Oh, no; that was all right."

"You can't think how busy we've all been this year, Bibbs. Of course we knew mamma was writing often, and—"

"Of course!" he said, readily. "There's a chunk of coal fallen on your glove, Edith. Better flick it off before it smears. My word! I'd almost forgotten how sooty it is here."

"We've been having very bright weather this month—for us." She blew the flake of soot into the air, seeming relieved.

He looked up at the dingy sky, wherein hung the disconsolate sun like a cold tin pan nailed up in a smoke-house by some lunatic, for a decoration. "Yes," said Bibbs. "It's very gay." A few moments later, as they passed a corner, "Aren't we going home?" he asked. "Your new driver is taking us out of the way, isn't he?"

"Good gracious!" she cried. "Didn't you know we'd moved? Didn't you know we were in the new house?"

"Why, no," said Bibbs. "Are you?"

"We've been there a month! Good gracious! Didn't you know—" She broke off, flushing again, and then went on hastily: "Of course, mamma's never been so busy in her life; we all haven't had time to do anything but keep on the hop. Mamma couldn't even come to the station today. Papa's got some of his business friends and people from around the old-house neighborhood coming tonight for a big dinner and 'house warming'—dreadful kind of people—but mamma's got it all on her hands. She's never sat down a minute; and if she did, papa would have her up again before—"

"Of course," said Bibbs. "Do you like the new place, Edith?"

"I don't like some of the things father would have in it, but it's the finest house in town, and that ought to be good enough for me! Papa bought one thing I like—a view of the Bay of Naples in oil that's perfectly beautiful; it's the first thing you see as you come in the front hall, and it's eleven feet long. But he would have that old 'fruit picture' we had in the Murphy street house hung up in the new dining room. It's horribly out of date to have those things in dining rooms, and I caught Bobby Lamborn giggling at it and Sibyl made fun of it, too, with Edith; and then told papa she agreed with him about its being such a fine thing, and said he did just right to insist on having it where he wanted it. She makes me tired! Sibyl!"

Edith's first constraint with her brother, amounting almost to awkwardness, vanished with this theme, though she still kept her full gaze always to the front, even in the extreme order of her denunciation of her sister-in-law.

"Sibyl!" she repeated, with such heat and vigor that the name seemed to strike fire on her lips. "I'd like to know why Roscoe couldn't have married somebody from here that would have done us some good, instead of this Sibyl! I met some awfully nice people from her town when mamma and I were at Atlantic City, last spring, and not one had ever heard of the Rocks! Not even heard of 'em'!"

"I thought you were great friends with Sibyl," Bibbs said.

"Up to the time I found her out!" the sister returned, with continuing vehemence. "I've found out some things about Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan lately—"

"It's only lately?"

"Well—" Edith hesitated, her lips setting primly. "Of course, I always did see that she never cared the snap of her little finger about Roscoe!"

"It seems," said Bibbs, in laconic protest, "that she married him."

The sister emitted a shrill cry, to be interpreted as contemptuous laughter, and, in her emotion, spoke too impulsively: "Why, she'd have married you!"

"No, no," he said; "she couldn't be that bad!"

"I didn't mean—" she began, distressed. "I only meant—I didn't mean—"

It's horribly out of date to have those things in dining rooms, and I caught Bobby Lamborn giggling at it and Sibyl made fun of it, too, with Edith; and then told papa she agreed with him about its being such a fine thing, and said he did just right to insist on having it where he wanted it. She makes me tired! Sibyl!"

Edith's first constraint with her brother, amounting almost to awkwardness, vanished with this theme, though she still kept her full gaze always to the front, even in the extreme order of her denunciation of her sister-in-law.

"Sibyl!" she repeated, with such heat and vigor that the name seemed to strike fire on her lips. "I'd like to know why Roscoe couldn't have married somebody from here that would have done us some good, instead of this Sibyl! I met some awfully nice people from her town when mamma and I were at Atlantic City, last spring, and not one had ever heard of the Rocks! Not even heard of 'em'!"

"I thought you were great friends with Sibyl," Bibbs said.

"Up to the time I found her out!" the sister returned, with continuing vehemence. "I've found out some things about Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan lately—"

"It's only lately?"

"Well—" Edith hesitated, her lips setting primly. "Of course, I always did see that she never cared the snap of her little finger about Roscoe!"

"Oh, well, I mean she's so insincere," said Edith, characteristically evasive when it came to stating the very point to which she had led, and in this not unique of her sex.

Bibbs contented himself with a non-committal gesture. "Business is crawling up the old streets," he said, his long, tremulous hand indicating a vasty structure in course of erection. "The boarding houses come first, and then the—"

"That isn't for shops," she informed him. "That's a new investment of papa's—the 'Sheridan apartments.'"

"Well, well," he murmured. "I supposed 'Sheridan' was almost well enough known here already."

"Oh, we're well enough known about!" she said, impatiently. "I guess there isn't a man, woman, child or nigger baby in town that doesn't know who we are. But we aren't in with the right people!"

"No!" he exclaimed. "Who's all that?"

"You know what I mean: the best people, the old families—the people that have the real social position in this town and that know they've got it."

Bibbs engaged in his silent chuckle again; he seemed highly amused. "I thought that the people who actually had the real what-do-you-call-it didn't know it," he said. "I've always understood that it was very unsatisfactory, because if you thought about it you didn't have it, and if you had it you didn't know it."

"That's just hush," she retorted. "They know it in this town, all right! I found out a lot of things, long before we began to think of building out in this direction. The right people in this town aren't always the society-column ones, and they mix around with outsiders, but they're a clan, just the same; and they have the clan feeling. Most of 'em were here long before papa came, and the grandfathers of the girls of my age knew each other, and—"

"I see," Bibbs interrupted, gravely. "Their ancestors fled together from many a stricken field, and crusaders' blood flows in their veins. I always understood the first house was built by an old party of the name of Vertrees, who couldn't get along with Dan'l Boone, and hurried away to these parts because Dan'l wanted him to give back a gun he'd lent him."

Edith gave a little ejaculation of alarm. "You mustn't repeat that story, Bibbs, even if it's true. The Vertreeses are the best family, and of course the very oldest here; they were an old family even before Mary Vertrees' great-grandfather came west and founded this settlement. He came from Lynn, Massachusetts, and they have relatives there yet—some of the best people in Lynn!"

"No!" exclaimed Bibbs, incredulously. "And there are other old families like the Vertreeses," she went on, not heeding him; "the Lamborns and the Kitterslys and the J. Palmerston Smiths—"

"Strange names to me," he interrupted. "Poor things! None of them have my acquaintance!"

"No, that's just it!" she cried. "And papa had never even heard the name of Vertrees! Mrs. Vertrees went with—"

By Lamborn told Sibyl he was going to bring his mother to call on her and on mamma, but it was weeks ago, and I notice he hasn't done it; and if Mrs. Vertrees decides not to know us, I'm darn sure Mrs. Lamborn 'll never come. That's one thing Sibyl didn't manage! She said Bobby offered to bring his mother—"

"You say he is a friend of Roscoe's?" Bibbs asked.

"Oh, he's a friend of the whole family," she returned, with a penitence which she made no effort to disguise. "Roscoe and he got acquainted somewhere, and they take him to the theater about every night. Sibyl has him to lunch, too, and keeps—"

She broke off with an angry little jerk of the head. "We can see the new house from the second corner ahead. Roscoe has built straight across the street from us, you know. Honestly, Sibyl makes me think of a snake, sometimes—the way she pulls the wool over people's eyes! She honeyys up to papa and gets anything in the world she wants out of him, and then makes fun of him behind his back—yes, and to his face, but he can't see it! She got him to give her a twelve-thousand-dollar porch for their house after it was—"

"Good heavens!" said Bibbs, staring ahead as they reached the corner and the car swung to the right, following a bend in the street. "Is that the new house?"

"Yes. What do you think of it?"

"Well," he drawled, "I'm pretty sure the sanitarium's about half a size bigger; I can't be certain till I measure."

And a moment later, as they entered the driveway, he added, seriously: "But it's beautiful!"

NO AMERICANS LOST ON SUSSEX

Safety of All is Confirmed by U. S. Embassies.

NEARLY 100 PERSONS MISSING

Captain of Steamer and a Number of Passengers Declare They Saw Torpedo Approaching.

London, March 23.—Although there is still some uncertainty as to the loss of life in the disaster to the "cross channel steamer" Sussex, on her way from Folkestone to Dieppe, Friday, there is no longer any doubt that the death list is much larger than the early figures indicated.

The latest figures compiled here show close to one hundred persons missing.

All the American passengers were rescued. The safety of Mrs. Callopie Anastasia Fennell, of New York, the last to be accounted for, was announced at both the London and Paris American embassies.

A Paris despatch says that it is authoritatively announced that Professor James Mark Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin, formerly of Princeton and Baltimore, were saved. Miss Elizabeth Baldwin, their daughter, was badly injured on the Sussex, and is now in a hospital.

It is further reported from Paris that Joshua Dickinson Armistead, of New York, who had previously been unaccounted for, is in a hospital at Dover, according to a despatch just received from there. He is badly injured, but will probably recover.

George Crocker, of Fitchburg, Mass., is in a serious condition in the same hospital. His skull was fractured by a falling mass. He regained consciousness and his physician believes he will recover. Wilder Penfield, of Hudson, Wis., is suffering from shock and bruises, but is not seriously injured.

More than half a dozen of the American survivors have sworn to affidavits declaring their belief that the ship was torpedoed. Most of them based their information upon the statements made by the captain and other officers of the vessel.

One of the Americans rescued was Tingle W. Culbertson, of Lewisburg, Pa.

Captain Mouffet, together with several of the officers and a number of passengers, asserts that the ship undoubtedly was torpedoed. Most of these witnesses, including the captain, declare they saw the torpedo approaching when it was at a distance of about 100 yards. Unfortunately, they say, there was not time enough to avoid it, although the captain made an attempt to effect the escape of his vessel by a quick maneuver.

GERMANY PROMISES AMENDS

Boat Sank, Sussex, Commander
Will be Punished.

Washington, March 23.—It was stated authoritatively here that should it be shown that a German submarine attacked the Sussex, Germany would allow the act, offer reparation, punish the submarine commander and satisfy the United States that the act was in violation of instructions.

It was also stated authoritatively that the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, was mainly responsible for the recent retirement of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, who is understood to have been eliminated because of his views on submarine warfare after Count von Bernstorff had made certain recommendations to the imperial chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg.

According to information here the ambassador was advised that Admiral von Tirpitz proposed to conduct a relentless submarine campaign against all shipping to British ports, and was asked what, in his opinion, would be the effect of such a campaign upon neutral nations, particularly the United States.

The ambassador's reply is said to have been an important factor in the retirement of the admiral.

It was made clear, however, that the German embassy believes a mine and not a torpedo damaged the channel steamer and that the German government may issue a statement.

Demand Head of Yuan Shi-Kai.

San Francisco, Cal., March 23.—An ultimatum demanding the resignation and exile of Yuan Shi-Kai and the execution of twelve of his advisers has been handed to the Yuan Shi-Kai government by the military governors of six revolting provinces, according to cable advice to the Chinese Republic association.

Turks to Quit Konia.

Athens, March 23.—Greek newspapers report that Turkish troops have been ordered to prepare to evacuate Konia, the town in Asia Minor, which has been used as a supply base for the Ottoman forces in Mesopotamia and Palestine.

Plant Gets 500 Car Order.

Butler, March 23.—The Standard Steel Car company has been awarded a contract for 500 steel cars for the Reading Railway company. A like number has been ordered from the Pressed Steel company.

THE MINNEAPOLIS SUNK

Many Feared Lost When Liner Was
Torpedoed in Mediterranean.

London, March 23.—The Atlantic Transport line steamer Minneapolis, for some time in the British government service as a transport, was sunk Wednesday by a submarine in the Mediterranean.

The disaster is believed to have happened near where the Provence was torpedoed.

News of the sinking was brought to Marseilles by Captain Dobby, of the British steamer Leicestershire, which arrived at Marseilles from Rangoon.

Lloyd's reports that eleven persons lost their lives. This assertion is contradicted by the Central News agency, which said the casualties had been very heavy.

The French steamer Hebe, 1491 tons; the British steamer Cerne, and the British fish carrier Kartoum, of Hull, have also been sunk, according to advices.

The crews of the Hebe and Cerne have been landed. Two members of the crew of the Kartoum have been saved, but it is feared the remaining nine men were drowned.

The British steamer St. Cecilia, from Portland, Me., March 11, for London, has been sunk by a mine, according to a despatch to Lloyd's from Dover. The crew was saved.

Lloyd's also reports that the British steamer Fenay Bridge has been sunk. The crew was landed.

NEW TARIFF BOARD BILL BEFORE HOUSE

Measure Said to Have Full
Approval of President.

Washington, March 23.—A revised bill for a permanent non-partisan commission on lines suggested by President Wilson, and which, it is said, has received his full approval, was introduced in the house of representatives by Representative Rainey, of Illinois, ranking Democratic member of the ways and means committee.

The bill would provide for the appointment of six commissioners at $10,000 a year each, no more than three of whom can belong to the same political party. The first appointments are to be made for two, four, six, eight, ten and twelve years, after which the terms of office of all are to be for twelve years. The chairman and vice chairman must be appointed biennially, according to the bill.

The duties of the commission are to investigate the administration and fiscal effects of the customs laws of this country, relations between the rates of duty on raw materials and finished products, effects of ad valorem and of specific duties, all questions relative to the arrangement of schedules and classification of articles in the law and to put all information in its possession at the disposal of the president, the house ways and means committee and the senate committee on finance.

MOB ATTACKS TROOPER

State Policeman Seriously Injured by Striking Furnacemen.

Washington, Pa., March 23.—State Trooper Charles Fierich is in a serious condition from injuries received at the hands of a mob of 100 striking furnacemen at the new Langlois plant of the American Zinc and Chemical company, fifteen miles north of here.

Fierich and another trooper, Joseph M. Jordan, endeavored to disperse the rioters, who were destroying company property when they were attacked. Jordan, single-handed, rescued his fellow-officer after a hard battle and was himself injured slightly.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FISH FOR LENT.

DAILED HALLIBUT. Get two and a half pounds of halibut, then fry it from skin side and bake it. Have ready chopped fine one large onion, six Spanish peppers (green) canned in oil, eight olives and a stalk of celery. Add a cupful of fine crumbs and add the mixture to the fish, with two tablespoonful of chutney sauce, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a cupful of tart apple sauce, a gill of melted butter and the whites of two eggs stiffly beaten. Put into well buttered baking shells or tins and bake from twenty to forty minutes, covering them the first fifteen.

Salmon Souffle. Flake enough cold boiled salmon to make two cupfuls. Add pepper, salt, the juice of an onion, two finely chopped cold boiled eggs, a teaspoonful of chopped onion, half a gill of cream and the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Toss the ingredients lightly and turn into buttered ramekins. Bake until puffed up and delicately browned.

Creamed Colish Tongues. Parboiled as many tongues as are needed to allow one to a portion. When done remove coat and skin and have ready a French cream sauce made in the following way: Put in a saucepan half a cupful of butter and when melted add the juice of a lemon, add as much bicarbonate of soda as would cover a 10 cent piece and then add a large cupful of rich milk that has had a dessert spoonful of cornstarch dissolved in it. Stir until it is smooth, then add pepper, salt and the tongues. When all is hot serve.

Shrimp Tarts. Line separate tart pans with good pie crust and crimp the edges. Shell and break in pieces a quart of freshly boiled shrimp. Make a good rich cream sauce and put in the shrimp, season well and fill the tarts, dusting the top of each with a few fine crumbs, grated cheese and pepper and salt. Put in the oven, and by the time the crust is done the filling will be brown on top.

Anna Thompson.

Effect of Shell Fire. When a 12-inch shell strikes the water it throws up a "splash" higher than a battleship's mast. This splash weighs about 2,000 tons, enough to sink a small ship.

A QUARTER of a cup of Atlantic

Rayolight Oil in the wash boiler and the white things will wash real white. And without a bit of back-breaking, Blue-Monday, washboard rubbing. But the use of Atlantic Rayolight Oil doesn't end with wash day nor with heating and lighting.

Hundreds and hundreds of women, practical, economical housewives, have written us that they simply couldn't do without it; use it every day in their housework, find it the finest thing to polish windows, to keep their sewing machines running smoothly, to clean painted surfaces and for heaps of other purposes.

But these same women buy Atlantic Rayolight Oil by name. They can't afford to take a chance on the nameless, unknown kerosene—their white things are too precious to trust to anything but the best, the finest kerosene and that they know is

ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL

It burns without smoke or smell, but with a clear, mellow, white light; burns slowly, too. It never varies in quality and so always produces identical results.

But with all these advantages, Atlantic Rayolight Oil costs no more than the unknown, nameless kerosene.

Here are Suits at $15.00 and $22.50 Possessing an Unusual Amount of Style and Value

This is going to be a rather unusual season—several reasons will make it so. The manufacturers are making serious complaint that they cannot get cloths to make up the garments and the scarcity of dyes has increased the cost of fabrics as well, making it difficult to secure fabrics of certain colors. In view of these conditions—these suits at $15.00 to $22.50 ought to be very interesting to any woman who has set a price of $15.00 to $22.50 for her spring suit.

One model made of blue Taffeta silk, has the new ripple cape collar coat with three silk frogs on the front semi-fitted, correct length, edged with blue velvet ribbon; the skirt is made along the new lines—hangs gracefully.

Other suits at $19.75 are made of serge, gabardines, shepherd checks—in fact, checks of various sizes—and every one of them in a striking, stunning style.

Other suits at $9.50 & $15.00 to $32.50 Every between price.

A Dressy Spring Dress at $16.50

Quite a number of women feel they would like to have at least one of their spring dresses made in a style that will be dressy as well as adaptable for use for street wear. So this dress made of sheer silk crepe and taffeta, trimmed with effective hand embroidery in one of the best styles of the season will surely appeal to you. Other dresses of silks and other fabrics, $5.75 to $15.00.

$5.00 Silk

Petticoats $3.95

With Taffeta silks at their present price level, this special value in a silk petticoat is a value extraordinary. The silk used is of good wearing taffeta—can be had in black, light blue, pink and other colors—as a matter of fact the variety of colors is broad enough for you to select a petticoat to wear with most any dress or suit you have. Only a limited quantity. Better make your selections early.

Corset Discrimination

Style is influenced by health and health is largely controlled by the corset worn. It is therefore obvious that care and discretion should be used in the selection of the corset.

We have no hesitancy in recommending Henderson back and front laced corsets.

They have the reputation of being the most artistically designed of all the known brands and are generally accepted as among the most stylish corsets in this country.

They are so carefully constructed that no undue pressure is brought to bear upon the vital parts, thereby endangering the health. A remarkable feature is that these excellent corsets can be sold at the prices we offer at $1.00 and upwards.

The New Waists for Spring Dozens Upon Dozens of Them.

And we mean every word of it—We've selected three models—can't say which of the three is the prettiest—you will like them all.

Crepe De Chine Wais's $2

A crepe de chine waist at $2.00 would be considered a good value most any time—right now while silks are advancing in price this is a very unusual value. Colors are maize and white, flesh and black; has the new collar and large pearl buttons.

Lacey Waists at $4.50 & $5.00

Made of Iridium laces over chiffon or embroidered nets—one trimmed with delicate shades of satin to help produce a pretty effect. Suitable as a dressy waist or for street wear.

Waists of Georgette Crepe 5.00.

These waists are made with the new collar which helps make a pretty frame for the throat and face. You will like the style—you will like the way the buttons are arranged. Colors Navy, White, Black and Flesh.

How a Duelist Was Eliminated

By ELINOR MARSH

During the reign of Louis XIII France was one vast dueling ground. Duelling was especially in vogue in the army. A practice of this sort is, of course, sure to be abused. A good swordsman who desired to be rid of one who stood in his way would pick a quarrel with him and kill him. Then, too, there were men who had a passion for killing other men.

Mlle. Louise d'Alger, a girl of that period, very beautiful, much beloved, was a resident of Paris. One of her relatives, a young man of great promise, was killed in a duel, and his death rendered her very bitter against the custom. She could not understand why when a man was challenged by a person who was perfectly capable of killing him and intended to kill him the victim should be considered bound in honor to accept the challenge. Nevertheless such was the custom of the times, and the challenged party had to choose between death and social ruin.

At this time in Paris was a man who had been "out" a great many times and always killed his antagonist. Scarcely a week passed but it was announced that some man prominent socially had fallen before his sword. A terror fell upon mothers, sisters and lovers lest one whose life was precious to them would be added to his victims. For a time it was hoped that some man more skillful than he would put him out of the way. But not one of the most admirable fencers in Paris seemed disposed to tackle him, and he did not trouble any of them.

Louise d'Alger declared that any means of getting rid of the Scourge, as he was called, would be excusable and wondered why some man did not stab him in the back. She was told that one who would do that would be regarded as a murderer.

"But," she replied, "the commits murder all the while."

"True, but there is no law to punish him. Should any one stab him in the back the person doing so would fall under the ban of the statute covering murder. Besides, he would be ostracized by his friends."

There seemed no justice, but great injustice, in this to Mlle. D'Alger, and she could not divert her mind from a feeling that such an enormity was suffered to exist merely by opinion. She brooded upon it till it seemed to her that she must do something to stop the Scourge's murders, just as Charlotte Corday at a later period did France of Marat.

Mlle. D'Alger possessed a fortune and, though she was not noble, held a high position in Paris society. One day the elite received invitations to a ball to be given by her. What was the Scourge's surprise to receive an invitation. He was not accustomed to receiving invitations unless he dropped a hint to some man of the family about to entertain that he would like one. Then the bid was forthcoming, for a refusal would be regarded as an insult and would cost a life. The Scourge was much flattered at receiving Mlle. D'Alger's invitation without any action on his own part. Then, too, he inferred that possibly she had fallen in love with him.

When he appeared among Mlle. D'Alger's guests every one was astonished. The hostess had no man relative through whom he might have forced an invitation, and it was not to be expected that she would invite him of her own free will. All eyes were turned upon her when the duelist on entering the ballroom stepped up to her to make the formal greeting due the hostess, and every one marveled at her cordial reception of him.

The Scourge was beside himself with pride and arrogance at having been invited to the house of a lady of prominence in face of the prejudice, as he called it, of all Paris. The first few dances he chose for partners some lady who had a brother, well knowing that she would not dare refuse him. Later he made his bow to the hostess. She smiled upon him graciously and took position on the floor beside him.

Every eye was turned upon the couple. Mlle. D'Alger's views with regard to duelling were well known, and no one knew of any way by which he could force such cordial treatment. Could it be that she had been fascinated by this man on account of the power he possessed through his sword?

When in the dance the Scourge took his partner's hand in his he felt something prick his finger. He paid no attention to it. Indeed, he could not well do so under the circumstances. Then he was seen to stagger and raise his hand to his head. Instead of conducting his partner to another locality in the room he tottered away by himself, but before he had gone a dozen steps sank down upon the floor. A circle formed about him, all wondering what could have happened to him.

Mlle. D'Alger called for lackers and directed them to carry out the fallen man who was already dead. Then turning to her guests said:

"Let not this episode interfere with your amusement."

She gave a sign to the musicians, who played another dance. No investigation was made as to the cause of the death of a man that all Paris hated and feared. On one of his fingers something like a pin prick was noticed, from which had exuded a drop of blood. It was known that his partner wore a ring on the hand he clasped, the setting of which was turned inward.

NOT A TURK U-BOAT

The Porte Joins Germany and Austria in Denying Attack on Persia.

Washington, March 28.—Turkey in formed the United States that it was not a submarine of the Ottoman government which sunk the steamship Persia in the Mediterranean last winter with loss of American life.

The Turkish note, in reply to repeated inquiries from the United States declares that all Ottoman submarines are under instructions to fly their national flag and that none was in the vicinity when the Persia was sunk.

Both Germany and Austria have denied that their submarines destroyed the ship.

Poor Pay for White House Stoker.

Washington, March 28.—Wages paid in the White House was under investigation by the house labor committee in considering the bill of Representative Nolan providing a minimum wage of $3 a day for government employees. Charles Williams, who stokes the furnaces at night that keeps the president's home warm, said his wages would not support his family, and that he is forced to seek extra work by day.

Literacy Clause Retained.

Washington, March 28.—By a vote of 225 to 82, the house decided to retain in the Burnett immigration bill the literacy clause that is expected to result in the president vetoing it. A requirement that all immigrants must be able to read and write in their own language.

Fortune in Kelp.

The kelp beds of British Columbia are said to be capable of furnishing annually 235,000 tons of potash, which figured at $50 a ton, would amount to $11,750,000. The iodine obtained, at the rate of $3.85 a ton, would amount to $3,680,000. The total calculated value of these two by-products of kelp (at pre-war prices) would thus amount to $15,000,000 per annum.

Beer Long a Popular Drink.

Beer is believed to be one of the most ancient of drinks. Manuscripts written at least 3,000 years before the Christian era show conclusively that even at that primitive period the manufacture of an intoxicating liquor from barley or other grain was extensively carried on in Europe.
